Film Title: "Spilled" – a Documentary about Real Ramen

Film Type: Documentary

Anticipated Release: November 2014

Creator/Director: Carl Rosa

Carl Rosa, founder of the nation's largest sushi-based organization, is finishing a full-length documentary on the truth behind creating a serious bowl of ramen. Spilled – a Documentary about Real Ramen is a straightforward yet entertaining glimpse into a universe that is seldom seen by the ordinary consumer. The odyssey to uncover the true nature of ramen begins in the unlikely, cosmopolitan city of Houston, Texas. The journey weaves across the United States gathering expert opinion from leading ramen experts...and then dives into the very heart of the ramen phenomenon, the busy streets and steamy ramen shops of Japan. Spilled offers a direct, no-holds-barred attitude that strips bare the secrets of the best bowls of ramen in the world.

The film is a combination of unrehearsed interviews with ramen experts and their unapologetic striving to create the perfect bowl of ramen. Rosa conducts a series of brutally candid conversations with modern ramen masters – including Tatsu Aikawa, Takuya Matsumoto, Tomo Takahashi, Ivan Orkin and many more. As the action moves through the United States and eventually to Japan, the audience will gain a serious appreciation for the immeasurable effort and dedication that makes a great bowl of ramen while learning the finer details that will lead to a true understanding of the dish. The film doesn't sugarcoat the process. Instead, it captures the brutally honest opinions of the hardest working ramen chefs in the United States and beyond – from Houston to Austin, from New York to Tokyo.

Latest Update: At the time of this press release, Spilled – a Documentary about Real Ramen is currently in post production. The concept of the documentary was developed in October 2012 by Carl Rosa.
